Fort Powhatan is in Prince George county. The place you refer to is known as "Powhatan's Seat," and there is no sort of reason to believe that the old chief was buried there. The location is in the grounds of the Mayo place, extensive lawns that used to run to the river, where there were two great stones—one of Captain John Smith fame and the other said to mark Powhatan's grave. These stones were taken to the Jamestown Exposition, and are probably now on those grounds. The old location is easily reached by following the main line of the Chesapeake and Ohio for about one mile below Fulton.
